HAYWOOD TELLS HOW HESTUDIED LAW IN A JAIL

Trial for Murder Good Use.

Seek Admission to Idaho Bar—Just Yet.

William D. Haywood smiled broadly

"Yes. I am learned enough in the law to pass the usual examination Idaho to the average applicant for bar honors, but I have a feeling that I would not be equal to the kind of a gruelling they would give me did I seek for admission to the practice of law. I guess I will wait a while."

Haywood is the secretary of the Western Federation of Miners who was acquitted of the charge of murder in Boise City a few months ago, and who is now on a tour of the Eastern States spreading the Western ideas of Socialism, and is everywhere meeting with bearty welcome.

He is one of President Roosevelt's 'undesirable citizens." Thousands of columns have been written about Haywood and his colleagues who were indicted for the murder of ex-Gov. Stunenberg. At his trial his demeanor was described as being cool and confident, but during the eighteen months that he spent in jail awaiting trial, which are always to the ordinary accused days of worry and nerve straining, Haywood was a student of law. During those long, tedious hours while his companions were frittering away their time or bewailing their fate. he was mastering the technicalities of Hawley and Blackstone. What a contrast between this man's eighteen months of healthy mind concentration and Harry Thaw's days of prison incar-

Couldn't Waste Time.

"I was able to read law with a clear head," said Haywood last night, "because I had absolute confidence in my ultimate acquittal, and I did not want to waste those mentrs spent in confine-

But in spite of the great labor problems that he has helped work out as the dominating officer in an organization of more than 48,660 men, he yet retains a keen sense of the humorous, and the idea of his making application to practise law at the Supreme Court of Idaho and received a common school education. In attending my duties as an officer of the Federation I soon saw that the fight to be made for it must be along legal lines, and I picked up a smattering of the law under the tutelage of John H. Murphy, whom I regard as one of the most able lawyers in our big country.

"After my arrest, and upon the advice of Murphy, I began a methodical and regular course of law study. I undertook the Sprague system and had moved of Murphy, I began a methodical and regular course of law study. I undertook the Sprague system and had moved to my cell at Ada County Jall my books, The bars of my cell made excellent book shelves. The cross bars were flat and about four inches wide and the unright bars were about three inches apart, making ample space for each volume.

Bars as His Book Case.

"Three sides of my cell were open. There was a good electric light for me at night, and reading law was a pleasure. The celling of my cell was cut with holes about one and one-half inches in diameter for ventilating purposes, and these I utilized as pigeon holes for my clippings and papers. They weren't quite big enouth, but they served the purpose.

"My study comprised Blackstone, Criminal Law, Domestic Relations, Torts and Evidence, I took my final examinations just a few days before my trial began and took 100 per cent. In Blackstone and a very good average in the other branches. I especially enjoyed the study of criminal law and looked up very carefully all the cases cited and made exhaustive notes on each one. I had access to the libraries of my atterneys and also to the public tion of law books was considerable.

"The time possed quickly because I was deeply interested in my work. I usually got up at 7 o'clock, took my shower bath and out-of-door exercise until 8 o'clock, when we had breakfast. From 9 until 12 I read, after getting rid of my correspondence. We ate funch at noon and between 2 and 4 P. M. I did more reading. But it was at night, after the cell doors had been locked, that I put in the hard work. I never got tired. I read also the Law Students' Helper, and it gave me good results.

Kept Up With News. "I kept in my cell files of all the labor and Socialist papers, so that I kept myself in touch with the outside world and had the pleasure of seeing our organization grow in membership from 27 601 + 18,000. our organization grow in membership from 27 feet is 48,000.

"I could give my books all my efforts for there was never anything to distract my attention. My conscience was clear and I knew that I would get a fair trial. Why? Because I knew that the whole world of labor would watch it and would see that I got nothing else. I knew that the best counsel in America would be engaged to defend me, and with that know here are consciousness of my innocence I a thought of worry.
"I am a lawyer, and I really feel that I could defend a man in a court of law, but I know that out in Idaho they "I am a lawyer, and I readly feel that I could defend a man in a court of law, but I know that out in Idaho they won't let me through those legal portals yet. But I won't have long to wait. Idaho will one day have a Socialist Governor."

And when that day eemes, if this same man is not himself in the Governor will be some cards printed that will read!

DENVER, Col. Jan. 22.—The Republican to Republican to-day prints an alleged confession because he believed they suspected him of murdering the woman. It was his intention, Sandesko says, to kill the wife and two children of one of his victims also, but the opportunity was not presented before he was arrested.

cording to the story, effec o Neroni, who is the county jail at pretending to be a Black Hand Society Sandesko states that Keroni then re-lated to him a series of murders he had committed, beganning with the killing of a neighbor who had abused him in Italy when he was but twelve years old. The narrative gradually brought him to a recital of details con-necting with the disappearance of the four Italians at Florence,
